

MARS BLAST OFF

THERE IS NOTHING in Times Square, or all New York, like the 800 seat Mars 2112, an extra-terrestrial blast off into a new restaurant dimension. Designed for youngsters, tour-

Restaurant Report

ists, conventioners, families, and local hipsters, it's certainly "kiddy heaven", and the ideal setting for birthdays and other gala celebrations. One reaches planet Mars via a simulated rocket ship manned by Martians. Entering the red planet you're greeted by more Martians, cavernous cave-like rock and boulder surroundings, an immense bar and a game room for children of all ages.

Sheldon Landwehr

Amiable aliens service tables, bringing stacks of comfort food from chicken wings to burgers, to roast beef to quesadias, some quite palatable, some not. Don't miss the irresistibly aromatic garlic bread.

★★ Mars 2112, 1633 B'way (51 St.), NY. (212) 582-2112. L-D daily. Ent. $12.95-$22.95. Acc. res., maj. cc.

© Sheldon Landwehr 2003

FOR THE RECORD

Restaurant reviews in this column are in no way paid advertising. Restaurants are selected at Landwehr's sole discretion and praised or panned accordingly. Also look for Landwehr in NY Resident and Black Tie International. Check-out his web site at www.sheldonlandwehr.com